Foreword

The tomato varietal names in this list printed in italics are the ones most largely used at present or are new varieties of proven merit gaining in favor.

Several of the varieties for which there is little or no demand we have this year dropped from our listing entirely.

Many of the other varieties which we print in plain roman face type are becoming obsolete. We believe the seed trade and the planter would in most cases be better off if they could be entirely eliminated. This because they are in most cases inferior in some one or more points; because of the very large pro rata increase in care and cash cost in growing and handling the smaller quantities; because of the confusion in a seed buyers mind in trying to select from too long a list suitable varieties for his planting.

All of which leads to confusion in the markets and marketing on account of so many types, shapes, colors, and quality of fruit.

However we have stock seed of nearly all varieties and if you have some local market or special condition which requires a variety not listed herein we will try to arrange with you to meet your requirements.
